

Bopro – Consultant Sustainability

Consultant Sustainability

- You work together with our project managers and the construction team. You are responsible for analyzing, evaluating and advising to support the achievement of existing and new sustainability labels and/or standards such as BREAAAM, DGNB, GRO, WELL, etc.
- You advise qualitatively and financially on all aspects of sustainable real estate developments, partly in the context of existing and future sustainability labels and/or standards.
- You prepare, manage and support technically and fiscally the study and implementation plans of sustainable real estate development projects. You determine the environmental impact of materials, CO2 emissions, and calculate the total cost of installations.
- You evaluate, align and coordinate relevant organizational, administrative and construction related processes.
- You contribute to the integration of circular principles into our building processes.
- You check models and constructions; both qualitatively and quantitatively.
- You contribute with financial risk measurements, investment analyses, feasibility studies and cost estimates.

In other words, as an expert, you help to build a strong sustainable expertise and, in the long run, a team!

What do we expect from you?

Sustainability is for you not just a buzzword; you actually identify yourself with this vision.

You have a bachelor's degree in architecture or construction engineering with a strong desire to contribute personally to building sustainable real estate.

Or you have another bachelor/master's degree (environmental sciences, bioengineer, techniques, etc.) and (a first) work experience with and interest in procedures, sustainability labels and/or standards in construction.

You take initiative, like to work in a structured way, with different stakeholders and according to priorities.

You are communicatively strong and understand when which stakeholder to engage in what way.

You take responsibility, are stress resistant, like to work autonomously and are willing to regularly to travel abroad.

You are very administratively strong and follow legislation and regulations closely.

You communicate fluently in English, and in Dutch or French. A good knowledge of the other national language (Dutch or French) helps.

What do we offer you?
